CURRENT SITUATION

The Santa Ana wind event that has driven the growth of this fire has expired and has been replaced by the normal on-shore weather pattern characterized by cooler daytime conditions, increased relative humidity and winds gusts maxing out at 20mph. This pattern will result in firefighters improving and expanding containment lines. However, challenges could arise should the wind shift and align with terrain and unburnt fuels. Existing containment lines that are subjected to wind shifts will be monitored closely by frontline firefighters and operational leadership to ensure expected fire behavior. Firefighters will work throughout the evening hours continuing to fill in gaps, reinforce containment lines, and actively patrol and thoroughly mop up hot spots.
Repopulation Efforts:
All evacuations related to the Saddle Ridge Fire have been lifted. We thank members of the community for promptly heeding the evacuation orders and their patience as we worked to contain the fire. As you repopulate the previously evacuated areas, we ask you to remain vigilant, and drive cautiously, as there are still public safety personnel working in the area. As a reminder, if you see anything of concern, report it to the authorities, and in case of an emergency, call 911.
